

Swedish Championship 2012

Written by Administrator

Wednesday, 16 May 2012 00:00 - Last Updated Monday, 07 January 2013 23:26

It was time to play Swedish Championship 2012.

I had been training good and felt very motivated to play. Came in pretty late to the venue, about half hour before it was supposed to start, not a good thing, normally I would be in at least two hours before the start.. But the venue was delayed pretty much so actually I was glad I was late, got an excellent warm up.

To make a long story short I played really good the whole day except the first game where I actually had one dart against me for the match. But I raised the level of my game to real high standards and found myself in the final. It was time to win the title again. Last time was back in 1997 so it was about time to do it again.

I had lost my PDC tourcard in January 2012 and decided not to go to Q-school, I had not played since January 2011 on the PDC tour due to my shoulder problems. I had decided to let this year to be my first recovery year of two, to get my body 100% OK and getting back the fun in darts. So finding myself in the Final of Swedish Championship was a great feeling.

The final was a great game where my opponent played his darts of his life and beat me. Not much to say more then back to the practice board because next time I am going to be even better.